dont waste your time here. Don't Buy It.

You can find a browser Version!. Fun little game, but way to easy once you realize that you can buy every card at cheap prizes at the market. OK for less than one buck on sale I think. Would not pay more ;-).. The concept of this game was interesting, but it was not implemented very well at all. There are many other PvE card games out there that I would recommend over this game.. It is short and easy to learn. Takes just abit over 1 hour to finish complete, so you dont get much time out of the game. None the less i would recommend it if you get it at a fair price. One of the better small/cheap games out there.

It's early access, so hopefully it will see a lot of improvements, because so far, it's a fun game. But there is just too much wrong with it.

- Crafting is useless (you can buy everything and it's cheaper)
- Easiest levels give the same amount of juice as the hardest
- You can buy EVERYTHING, even the most powerful cards
- No way to delete useless cards and your Inv becomes a mess
- After buying the most powerful cards, there is no challenge left
- Booster packs are unbalanced and overpriced (2 Bronze packs are cheaper than 1 gold pack and you get more cards and the same amount of rare cards)

Some suggestions for possible improvements:

- Crafting overhaul for the weapons: Buy weapons and use materials to improve them further, maybe 3 levels of improvement
- You can't buy cards, without crafting them first
- You can't play a level twice, only make a random game, based on you current level
- Possible to sell cards
- Convert cards into materials
- Levels don't give almost the same amount of juice, no matter how hard
- You can claim a card after beating a level
- Less juice in general, more materials
- Cards are much more expensive, so it's harder to craft/buy the most powerful
- Pricing for the booster packs needs improvement

But would i recommend it? Well, it has potential and looks great. So yes and no. If you don't mind the flaws and you are searching for a rather easy game, then go for it. Doesn't cost much, so why not.. Here you have to use your cards wisely, it starts simple at the begin, but dont fool yourself you have to stay aware that you need to upgrade your cards

try to use stronger cards only when you need them to gain your chainces
